Legal.

Ethical.

Relentless.

When crisis hits, the spotlight finds you.
And the media doesn't care if you've never done a press conference before. They don't care if you're "not the public spokesperson." They don't care if you need time to prepare.

They care about the story. And you're it.
Third Degree Communications trains public-facing professionals across every sector who need to communicate clearly, confidently, and correctly when their organization faces scrutiny.

THE 3-DAY ADVANTAGE:

Days 1-2: Crisis communication frameworks, coordination protocols, response strategies, and relationship-building techniques that work across ALL public service and corporate environments.

Day 3: Exclusive newsroom access (live or virtual) where you see how mediaprofessionals select stories, operate under pressure, and decide which spokespersons look credible vs. which ones create more questions than answers.

YOUR TEAM WILL LEARN:

- Internal operations of news studios and editorial decisions
- What elevates incidents from local coverage to national attention
- How reporters juggle breaking news against scheduled segments
- Your role in providing context before narratives form
- Best practices that build media trust across organizational types

SPECIALIZED FRAMEWORKS FOR:

- Law enforcement: Officer-involved incidents, federal coordination, high-profile operations
- Fire/EMS: Disaster response, evacuation management, multi-casualty incidents
- City/County/State: Infrastructure failures, public health emergencies, budget crises
- Federal Agencies: Multi-jurisdictional coordination, policy announcements, investigations
- Corporate: Workplace incidents, community impact events, crisis management

Your Instructors Have Faced the Fire:

Decades of combined experience managing media during Oakland's Ghost Ship Fire, major law enforcement operations, federal investigations, and multi-agency crisis response.

Here's what students say:

"This wasn't just law enforcement training. These strategies apply to every high-pressure public role I've held."

— Emergency Management Director

Three days. Multiple sectors. One universal truth: Preparation beats improvisation every single time.
